Turin, Auguſt 23. N. S.

THEIR Royal Highneſſes continue to take the benefit of the Country Air, for the perfect Re-eſtabliſhment of their Health. On the 18th of this Month they lay at Count Mazin's Caſtle, and returned the next Day to St. George, where they are to continue for ſome time, finding much Relief from the Air of that Place. The King of Spain's Adjutant, who brought hither an Account of the Victory obtained by his Catholick Majeſty's Arms on the 27th of the laſt Month, returned yeſterday towards Catalonia. His Royal Highneſs's Cavalry continues ſtill at Cavours, only one Regiment of Dragoons is encamped at Proſaſco; that of the Emperor is at preſent at Vigon, where Vaubonne's Regiment of Dragoons is likewiſe arrived, but Viſconti's Imperial Regiment is at Tirea. Letters from the Army adviſe, that on the 10th, 11th and 12th Inſtant the Troops were buſied in relieving the ſeveral Poſts; and foraſmuch as the Enemy was found to be too advantageouſly ſituated to be attacked in their Camp; that Forage and Proviſions was grown ſcarce; and that the Snow and Cold Weather began to be very troubleſom in thoſe naked Mountains, Marſhal Thaun reſolved to ſend a ſtrong Detachment to Baron Rhebinder at Oulx, to enable him to penetrate into the Enemy's Country at ſome other Place. That Detachment, conſiſting of ten Battallions, under the Command of the Marquis d'Andorno, marched accordingly on the 12th. The Army, the better to favour and cover this Movement, continued in their Camp at Foglioſa that Day and the next. The 14th they marched in ſight of the Enemy, and advanced towards the Vally of Stura, having firſt blown up the Forts of Arche and Caſtelet. The Baron de Schulembourg joined the Army in their March with his own Troops, and ſome other Detachments. They encamped that Night at Argentiere; the 15th at Simbuc, and the 16th at Demont, where they continued the 17th, Count Thaun's Quarters being at Caraglio. During their ſtay there the Marquis d'Andorno ſent Word that he arrived at Abriez on the 14th, with the ten Battalions under his Command, and that he had been to view the Enemy's Poſts on the ſide of Molines. The 18th the Army marched towards Caraglio, where it arrived the ſame Day. On the 19th, early in the Morning, they continued their March, and arrived in the Afternoon at Caſtiglione, where they were informed that the Marquis d' Andorno had joined the Baron de Rhebinder on the 17th at Oulx. The 20th the Army encamped at Carda on the Po, from whence it continued its March by Pignerol towards Feneſtrelles, in order to try if any thing might be undertaken on that ſide. General Thaun marched before the Army with a Detachment towards Suſa, that he might be the better able to diſpoſe every thing for the Execution of his Deſigns. Letters from the Frontiers adviſe, that the Duke of Berwick being informed of the new Movements our Army had made, had detached ten Battalions for a Reinforcement of the Troops that guarded the Heights of Briançon, and the Paſs of Valoire, and had likewiſe made another Detachment into the Vally of Queiras, to join the Troops, that were poſted in the Plain; and that having ſent ten Batralions towards the Vally of Barcelonetta, for the Security of Provence on that ſide, he continued near Tournos and Guilleſtre. Our laſt Letters from Catalonia tell us, that ſeveral Places in Arragon had ſurrendred to his Catholick Majeſty, and that the Duke of Anjou was preparing to paſs the Cinca at Fraga, in order to cover the reſt of that Province.
